TRAVELING: COMPARING PLACES TO GO ON VACATION

Traveling

There are different aspects to consider before you go somewhere:

- tourist attractions
- affordability
- safety
- food
- infrastructure and transportation
- weather
- language
- traditions and customs

GOODSTUDIO/SHUTTERSTOCK.COM

Different ways to talk about the future

- simple present and present continuous: for schedules and time-tabled events.
- will and be going to: for decisions made before or at the time of speaking; predictions of the future based or not in present evidence, promises and offers.
- future perfect and future perfect continuous: for the completion of actions in a certain time of the future, emphasizing or not the length of them.

SUMMING-UP PERSONAL INFORMATION

Preferences

Prefer and prefer + -ing

prefer something	to something else
prefer doing something	to doing something else
	rather than (doing) something else
prefer to do something	rather than (do) something

I prefer São Paulo to Rio de Janeiro.
 She prefers traveling with friends rather than by herself.
 They prefer to eat vegetarian food rather than meat.

Would rather and would prefer

They would rather stay at their houses.
 He would prefer to stay at his house.

Wish and If only

+ a past form: If only she saw what a bad person he is.
 + a past perfect form: I wish I hadn't made so many mistakes in the test.

Conditionals

Zero conditional (true)	if + simple present + simple present	Grass gets wet if it rains .
First conditional (likely/possible)	if + simple present + modal verb with future meaning (shall/should/will/would/can/could/may/might)	If you buy more clothes, you will not be able to go to the party.
Second conditional (less likely/less possible)	if + simple past + modal verb with future-in-the-past meaning (should/would/might/could)	If I had money, I would go to that party with you.
Third conditional (impossible)	if + past perfect + modal verb with future-in-the-past meaning (should/would/might/could) + have + past participle	If you had called me, I would have come to help you.

Unless

First conditional + unless + present tense

You'll be sick unless you wear warmer clothes. (= You will be sick if you don't wear warmer clothes.)

Second conditional + unless + past tense

Unless he was tired, he would go out. (= If he wasn't so tired, he would go out.)

Third conditional + unless + past perfect

I wouldn't have talked to him unless you'd suggested it.
 (= I wouldn't have talked to him if you hadn't suggested it.)

GETTING FIT: DISCUSSING WAYS OF ENCOURAGING PEOPLE TO EXERCISE

Inclusive and body positive fitness

It's essential to guarantee we don't judge someone's health because of his/her appearance. Both fat, thin, strong, weak, with disabilities, young or old people can have a healthy life.

The importance of exercising

- reduces risk of major illnesses: type 2 diabetes, coronary heart disease, stroke, stress, depression, dementia, Alzheimer's, and others? Never ever!
- benefits for health: boosts self-esteem, mood, sleep quality, gives energy, and many other things.
- final call: exercise is free, easy to take, and it has immediate effect on the body.

Agreeing with "so" and "neither"

- Use so to agree with affirmative statements:
My classmates loved to study about fitness and so did I. (Me too is another option.)
- Use neither to agree with negative statements:
"I won't judge someone's health based on their appearance." "Neither won't my friends nor my family, I'm going to warn all of them." (Nor is used to add other ideas to a negative sentence.)
